

Cat owner defended

I read the story about Rhonda Goss and her feline friends. This story is alarming.

Goss pays property taxes, which help keep schools and police operating in Manheim Township.

This lady was just trying to keep the cat population down around her neighborhood.

That her neighbors thought she had four or five cats seems to be no issue in her neighborhood.

Where are her rights as a property owner? It's her home, the cats are not harming anyone. But, wait, she broke the animal code of the township. Fine her or send her to the district justice. She is a lawbreaker.

Ms. Goss, don't give in -- your home your property, no harm done. This is about revenue. You did nothing wrong.

Jerry Keller, Columbia