A MUSICAL ON THE MAINSTAGE

November 23-25

The Belmont
THEATRE

Mary Ellen Graybill, a periodic contributing correspondent, sent along this mini-review of the Annie production at York's Belmont Theatre.

LEAPIN' LIZARDS!

McKenna Spangler of Dallastown played Annie, and Christopher Quigley played Daddy Warbucks in the beloved family musical set in the Depression years when FDR developed the New Deal.

Everyone left in great spirits after seeing and hearing Little Orphan Annie triumph over circumstances. Annie, who was first described by a poem by James Riley in 1885, has a message of love and hope for all today. Even her stray dog seemed to love her, giving a classic performance- looking bewildered at the audience on cue!

We all left humming with the song "The sun will come up tomorrow."

Always good to turn back the clock to 1935 to remind us of change that does happen for good ... "tomorrow."
